It is evident the peace of 1918 was not the piece the military machine of Potsdam had been looking for but it might have been worse although it is hard to pound logic thru a hitching post.

It is sometimes difficult to determine whether a man lives in comfort or luxury. But just now there is an unflinching test which may be applied. You have only to ascertain whether he eats eggs for breakfast.

A writer in the N. Y. Tribune explains how Germany can pay an indemnity of one hundred billion dollars on the instalment plan, with interest. This will mean an annual payment of five billion dollars for thirty-nine years. We trust that this calculation will encourage the Germans.

The problems of the poor weather-man are becoming more complicated each year. The mere guessing of whether or not, it is going to rain on a certain day or during a certain week has change to the much more risky bet of whether or not we are going to have winter during December, January and February or during June, July, August.

We stand upon the threshold of a new era, and we cannot predict what its opening door will show us.

During the next few months our young men will come home from abroad. They are indeed picked men. Both in physical and mental qualities. They are the best representatives of our nation. From their age and qualifications we know them to be men who will shape the policies of this country for the next twenty-five years.

Two million in number, they have gone through an experience which was certain to alter them. What changes may have been made in their character and opinions we cannot tell.

Probably their military training will lead them to demand more exactness in all details and business arrangements. But this is entirely subordinate to the great question of how they will react upon America—how they will form her ideas and influence her. Just now they are only our boys coming home, and we will receive them with a joyous welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clinton, of Waukegan, Okla., and their three sons, Edward, Herbert and Lester, who have been visiting Mrs. Clinton's parents, John Smith and wife, of Whites Bend, have gone to Putnam county, where they will spend a few days before returning home.

Spanish Influenza can be prevented easier than it can be cured.

Col. Roosevelt Dies Suddenly.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, for seven years President of the United States, statesman, soldier, author, explorer, sportsman and red-blooded American, died suddenly at his home in Oster Bay Monday morning at 4:15 o'clock. Although he had been ill for several months and had been under treatment at a New York hospital, his family, his friends and the country were entirely unprepared for his sudden passing, for within the last few days there had been no indications that the end was so near. Death was due, according to his physicians, to a blood clot on the lung which was due indirectly to an attack of inflammatory rheumatism and to a fever which he contracted during his journey of exploration in South American jungles. "Put out the light, please," were his last words and these were uttered to his faithful negro servant Joseph Amos, who later noted the heavy breathing of former President and summoned assistance. When Mrs. Roosevelt, the nurse and the family physician arrived at the bedside, life was extinct. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at the Oyster Bay home and at the Christ Episcopal church in that village. Both funeral and burial were simple and private.

A Knock For The Good of The Town.

The Sentinel never likes to knock on its old home town, unless, it has something to knock about, and that the knocking will knock out the thing that it knocking on. Really and truly we are not knocking, but raising a subject for the consideration of the business and professional men of the town, with a hope that they may be awakened with a speedy action in view.

Gainesboro is as dead as the Kaiser as far as not having a hotel is concerned, and will remain so, until the owners of the hotel can agree among themselves, as to whether or not they will rent it out, or keep it locked up, and let stand as an ornament on the public square. We do not know who the stockholders are, and care less, but we do know and so do they, that unless they do rent it to some one, the traveling and other business men will have to pass us by. Either open, buy or sell out, and give way to the man that has the love of his town at heart.

Don't stand around unconcerned, and look like Fido in the First Reader; do something or shake a bush. Wake up fellows, and put the old town in shape to receive her guests in a pleasant way.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to James Washburn, deceased, will please call upon Ree Roberts at the store house of the deceased, at once and make settlement. He is authorized by me to make settlement and receipt you for same.

Jackson County High School Has Splendid Enrollment.

The Jackson County High School reopened Dec. 30, and the interest and enrollment have been growing almost daily. The average interest by next week will, no doubt, be as great as it has been at any time since the opening last August.

The following students have enrolled for the first time: Joe Myers, Ernest Meadows, Lee Sadler Darwin, Georgia Flynn and Drewery Birdwell. Lillian Meadows, who has recently had measles, will soon return. Other high school pupils will enroll next week.

The roll of honor students for the third month are: Reba Smith, Willie Smith, Lillian Meadows, Rose Sadler, Elizabeth Sadler, Edna Smith, Corninne Tinsley, Dorris Johnson, Willard Johnson. These students did not miss a day, a recitation, or were ever tardy.

The students who are in regular attendance form the nucleus of the school. The life of the school centers around the nucleus. Regular students demonstrate the life of a school. Each parent might ask the question, "Is my child a part of the heart of the school?"

The writer will give concrete examples of regular attendance upon school: Maxine Gainer, Lexington, Tenn., missed three days in December, this being the first she had missed from school since entering seven years ago. In the same school Elizabeth Ball forced to miss school in December broke a four year record. Georgia McCall in December still had an unbroken record for seven years.

Education is a growth, and is not obtained by leaps and bounds. This matter of education should be made a business—an important business—and not a side line. About the only way to maintain an interest in school is for the child to make a record both in regular and punctual attendance. Success in some studies demands just this kind of attendance. Irregular attendance leads to no knowledge or fragmentary, which is of little use.

The child's interest should be permanent and not temporary. A parent's carelessness or indifference may lead to a loss of interest in the child. While the child is interested, don't kill the interest, it means too much to your child. Most children would accomplish a great deal, if they were kept in school for the remainder of the year, nineteen weeks.

It Helps!

There can be no doubt as to the merit of Cardui, the woman's tonic, in the treatment of many troubles peculiar to women. The thousands of women who have been helped by Cardui in the past 40 years, is conclusive proof that it is a good medicine for women who suffer. It should help you, too.
